All about thousands of years. The Romans knew what was good for them early on: getting together at the Aquae Helveticae, the Helvetic springs in the region today known as Baden. From the 15th century on the Helvetic confederates held regular meetings in Baden and united city and rural areas in to a thriving Switzerland – and this likely accompanied by many a drink in the Blume, first mentioned in 1421. In the 19th century, Charles E. Brown and Walter Boveri – still the "B's" in ABB – had the opportunity of dining in the Atrium gallery, built in 1840. All about enjoyment.
